Property Description	The church of the Annunciation's front elevation is raised on plinths. Its façade is divided into three bays. The two side bays are identical: they both have two full flat pilasters with ionic capitals and another pilaster which is cut in half to join the pilasters framing the central bay. The central bay contains a rectangular door with stone moulding and a broken triangular pediment. Above the main doorway, there is an arch window and a triangular pediment. Running along the entire width of the façade, there is a blank entablature topped with a heavy cornice. The façade terminates with two square bell tower and a pointed spire together with a cylindrical dome.
